

Raspy Berries No Panties

Raspy Berries' debut-single "No Panties" invites you to celebrate the joy of your own company!

The up-coming band Raspy Berries hits a nerve with "No panties" at a time when everybody has to be more alone than usual, because of the pandemic. Raspy Berries encourage tongue in cheek to make use of the opportunity for introspection. The acoustic live-sound sticks out from the crowd of electronic music and big productions and appears as a catchy alternative to the mainstream by being both nostalgic and contemporary.

Raspy Berries, which consists of Ida Kæraa Lücke and Asta Dea Nistad Evensen, is an up-coming band from the underground live-music of Copenhagen. "No panties" is an alternative soul-song about self-love in both the emotional and physical sense, and seduces with a juicy groove and an intimate power-vocal.

Raspy Berries is an intersectional feminist band, that fights for diversity. Their songs are written from the point of view of a young person navigating difficult taboo subjects like sexuality, gender, dreams and trauma, and handle these themes with a raw, unfiltered intimacy and inclusive heartfeltness.

The single "No panties" started as a casual chat between the band members about partying alone at home without panties underneath a leather skirt.

The conversation evolved reflecting upon broader social problems concerning existing expectations of self and sexuality. The band members came to the agreement that taking time alone does not necessarily mean that you are discarding to be social with others. It can simply mean that you are choosing your own company instead. Therefore, the main message of the song became: "exploring sexuality does not have to be for anyone but yourself."

Raspy Berries distinct overall sound is a result of the dogma that the musical arrangement of the songs are possible to play in a live-setting by Asta, the multiinstrumentalist of the band. -Asta plays drums and keyboard at the same time. This creative constraint gives an experimental and minimalistic sound, where every detail counts, and the different parts of the instrumental merge into one dance. The result is a groove with keyboard inspired by Soul and Glamrock and rhythms inspired by Rock and R'n'B.

Through experimental playful vocal, tasty attitude, soulful depth and jazzy sound, front-singer Ida conveys stories with sincerity and strength.

"No panties" is a collaboration with artist B'vek Pakuwal, who plays bass on the single. His jazzy and funky bass gives an extra playful element to the song's alternative orgasmic universe.

Raspy Berries' overall sound is juicy and delicious as a berry, and raw and intimate as a raspy voice of a young woman who, late at night, is contemplating about all the spectrums of identity and social inequality.
